IN THE CAMP OF THE GIBSONITES!

Joseph, Whose Surname is Hamilton, and Anna, Daughter of Young.

THERE WAS A GREAT FEAST AND MUCH JOY.

And it came to pass in those days that there was a wedding in the camp of the Gibsonites, when Joseph, whose surname is Hamilton, took Anna, daughter of Young, to be his wife. All the young men and maidens of the region round about were bidden to the feast, and gladly they hastened at the summons for well they liked the bridegroom and the fair maiden, and a wedding feast is ever a goodly thing to the young, and to the elders likewise.

Then was bidden Katie, daughter of Quinn, the lawgiver, and David, the sweet singer, of Gallup, that they bear the bride and groom close company, to cheer their spirits during the ceremony when they twain should be made one flesh.

Then followed the feasting. After that, was the floor cleared, and David, with Walter and Robert, did make music with the stringed instruments and horns before the people; and the young men and maidens danced for joy, saying, "As it is with Joseph and Anna, so may it be with us before the year is ended," so their hearts and feet were light at the marriage feast in the camp of the Gibsonites.

But it chanced that one of the young men, looking on at the dancing of the young men and the maidens, grew bitter at heart, and "longed for a scrap," as it is said by the heathen, and joined not in the merry-making, but with frowning countenance regarded them.

Then spake he to Thomas, whose surname is McAllister, and said: "I like not this revelry; seeest thou that musician from Gallup, his laugheth at me?" "Nay, now," said Thomas: "he laugheth only at the sayings of that Walter, who is a fellow of droll fancies."

"Not so," urged he of the kitchen, "I like it not and I fain would stop his laughing, lest in time he laugh at me, if so be that he laugheth not at me now."

Then said Thomas, holding by the garment of him that was wroth: "It is not seemly that thou goest to quiet the laughter, for whether there be cause or not, one laugheth at a wedding. Better that thou lookest to the bread and meat if so be there remain enough for the morning."

Then, he of the kitchen, waxed more wroth than before and plucked his garment from the hands of Thomas, and started forth.

Then, Thomas, being vexed that his counsel prevailed not, bethought himself of how it is written: "Answer a fool according to his folly," and he said to him of the stew pan: "Go then, thou stubborn!" and straightway he goeth; and when he had come to the place where David, with Walter and Robert were, he cried out, "Say, thou musician! Why laughest thou at me?"

Then answered David, being astonished at his words, for he knew him not at all. "I laugh not at thee, for I know thee not, or wist not that thou wast near me."

Then the anger of the cook waxed hot and he cried in a loud voice: "Thou didst! Thou son of Ananias!" Then answered David, as he reached forth his hand as is the manner of his countrymen at such salutation: "Thou errest! For I am no son of Ananias, but the son of William, and though I laugh not at thee, mayhap there be others that will."

"Then, straightway, he of the pots and kettles grew weary, and would fain have rested for a time on the floor among the dancers, but that he was persuaded to return to the kitchen, lest he be trod upon by the careless. Yet he was not satisfied, but gnashed his teeth, and sharpened his carving knife, for, he said to himself, peradventure when he leaveth he may pass through my domain, and for reason that he now laughs at me, if perchance he laugh not at me in the beginning, will I spoil his face that the maidens will no longer deem it comely."

And it was told to David: "Knowest thou that the rooster of meats lieth in wait for thee at the entrance to the kitchen? So go thou quietly out by another way."

But David answered and said: "Not so. If that door leadeth to the kitchen that conveys us to Gallup, then through that door lieth the way that I go."

Then David gathered up the stringed instrument and the manuscript bearing the notes thereof, and the rack whereon is placed the music that he plays may read, and passed on.

"But from his hiding place cometh the cook with the carving knife, and aimeth a stroke at the head of David, the son of William."

Then was David wroth with the man for such unseemly action, bringing reproach on the people, and quickly dodging the stroke of the carving knife, he smote the cook with the rack whereon the music is placed, both right and left, till the knife fell from his grasp, and he was fain to seek refuge behind a table and a new weapon thence that he might hurl it at David, and not be again within reach of the rack whereon the music is placed.

Then arose Chien, a valiant man and wrestled with the bean boiler, and took from him the cleaver.

Then came a woman, wife of McQuade, and cried to David, "Carest thou not for the men who go down to the mines? Wouldst thou, that they go hungry to work, that thus thou mailest the hash-maker? Get thee out of the kitchen."

Then was David hustled from the kitchen and the maidens came down from the chairs, and out from the corners, and with much kissing and good-byeing, and telling over of good wishes for the bride and bridegroom, the people dispersed, each going to his own home, and this is the whole of the episode of the marriage feast at Gibson.

CHARLEY GOIN BURNED UP.

Fifteen-Year-Old Boy Caught in a burning Cabin.

At Goin's saw mill, near San Geronimo, San Miguel county, Charley Goin, the 15-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Goin, was sleeping alone in the cottage near the mill and from some unknown cause, probably the stove, the cottage took fire and was burned to the ground. The charred remains of the poor boy were found near the door, showing that he had tried to make his escape and had failed. He probably was overcome by the smoke and heat before the flames began their work upon his flesh.

HAS GONE TO THE JURY.

Case of Alleged Train Robbers Nearly Finished.

The testimony in the case of the United States against the six alleged train robbers has been concluded, and the greater portion of Tuesday's day was devoted to the arguments on both sides. The case went to the jury late that night. It seems to be the opinion that the chances are good for a hung jury. The trial was one of the most interesting and closely contested in the history of criminal law in New Mexico. The court room has been crowded during the arguments.

TERRITORY OF ARIZONA.

PRESCOTT.

Mr. Morgenthau has sold out his stock in forests on Lower Turkey creek, near here, and has gone to Phoenix.

Mrs. Coffman and Miss Daisy Coffman have gone to New York City to visit Mrs. Coffman's sister, who is dangerously ill.

At the meeting of Trough House Company No. 1, the following officers were elected: E. H. Fredericks, foreman; Charles Lanier, second assistant foreman; John Spaulding, secretary; Adolph Mosher, treasurer.

Report was received in Prescott that Thomas Thompson had killed a large silver bear near Bully Buena, in this county. The bear weighed over 600 pounds. The bear had just killed a cow and was in the act of devouring it when Thompson came upon the scene. He fired upon the bear and after a chase of about a mile he succeeded in killing it. The bear had been killing cattle in that vicinity for some time. Its carcass was rolling fat, but the meat rather too strong to be palatable.

KINGMAN.

From the Miner.

Clark Berry, of Poland, recently returned from four carloads of Oro Plata ore recently shipped to the Pueblo smelter. The ore netted them $7,000.

H. L. Harris, who recently sold his interest in a number of rich placer claims on the Colorado river to the Temple Bar Consolidated Mining company, is in Kingman.

Walter Burkhardt, of Mineral Park, was in Kingman a few days ago purchasing lumber and timbers with which to timber up the shaft of an old mine recently located by him.

K. F. Kwing has located a ledge on Knight creek in the Aquarius range, from which gave a return of three ounces gold and twenty per cent copper. The ledge is two feet in width and can be traced on the surface for quite a distance. An Indian piloted him to the ledge.

George Simmons, formerly of Kingman, discoverer of the turquoise mines on Timber mountain, Nevada, has just disposed of $67,000 worth of the gems to New York jewelers. He has two cutters on the ground freeing the gems from extraneous matter. Simmons is an old timer and a prospector and was at one time a mining partner of John Smithline, of Chloride.

PHOENIX.

Real estate is getting into market again in Phoenix and the valley in pretty good shape.

N. S. Berry, the former superintendent of the Old Dominion Copper company at Globe, but now a mining man of New Mexico, is in the city on business.

Sam. Torres, of Florence, arrived in the city to purchase material for a Spanish newspaper to be started there. The only other paper in Pinal county is the Florence Tribune.

Sleeping is nearly finished in the valley. The work has been interfered with somewhat by a shortage of sheep on the desert, and a large number of sheep were taken back to the northern part of the territory.

The returns of the census marshal show the children of school age in this district to number 1,435. As to color, they are distributed as follows: White, male, 721; white, female, 740; colored, male, 10; colored, female, four. There is an increase of 122 over the showing of a year ago.

Articles of incorporation of the Johnsonville Land and Water company have been filed in the office of the territorial secretary. The incorporators are Henry A. Darling, George H. Curtis, Walter Rose, A. M. Squires and Donald Barker. They are residents of Los Angeles and Chicago.

Solomonville item in the Phoenix Republican: Among the passengers who came over from Bowie was Rev. W. T. Harwood, of Albuquerque, who has been in Tucson. He is a missionary among the Spanish speaking people and has been over in this section a number of times. His service in Spanish work dates back twenty-five years.

On Sunday afternoon the Academy of Music was burglarized. The Academy is located on Monroe street, between First and Second avenues, and nobody was at home at the time except Miss Gallardo and G. Lopez, who were practicing at the time, a fact which was taken advantage of by the burglar who ransacked the house. In the room occupied by Professor Manzo was a roll of bills amounting to $125, but in some way the thief must have lost his conscience trouble him for he took $100 and left the remainder in Miss Gallardo's room. He found a gold watch and chain, which was taken, and also several other articles. The burglary was not discovered until Professor Manzo returned home, when the police were notified.

The Optic says: "Quite a number of cases of small pox are reported at Laury. It may be well for the territorial board of health to look into the correctness of this report, and see if anything should be done in the way of quarantining the place."

Alba Heywood, the impersonator, singer and actor, was mortally wounded at Longview, Texas, by Opera House Manager F. Pegus, who was shot, perhaps fatally, by Heywood. The tragedy occurred in the opera house, but no one witnessed it, and no one knew of it until the participants walked several blocks and fell. Pegus says the trouble grew out of the free admission of his family. Heywood told Pegus he had not acted as a gentleman, whereupon Pegus hit him in the face. Heywood then began shooting, putting three balls into Pegus' body and one into his head. After being shot in the head Pegus fell, and he was shot once after he was down. Heywood then started to leave the opera house, but Pegus called and shot at him as he passed out, and going to the door, emptied his revolver, one ball striking Heywood in the right breast and passing through his body. Heywood's statement is that Pegus shot him through the nose first and hit him on the head with his pistol. He then opened fire on Pegus. The remainder of his statement is substantially the same as that of Pegus. Alba Heywood is known throughout the country, and P. T. Pegus is manager of the Longview Ice and Bottling Works, and half owner in the electric light plant there. He is one of the most surprising young citizens of Longview. He has been married about a year. His most dangerous wound is in the right chest. Heywood's two brothers, Deway and O. H. Heywood, both actors, were notified at Nashville, Tenn., and have started for Longview. The company will likely cancel all engagements.
